observed in the treatises of previous writers. These had indeed delivered excellent maxims of perfection, but not in such a form as to be immediately applicable to the needs of individual souls. F. Scaramelli has not failed to set forth the scientific, theological, basis of each branch of his subject, following herein mainly the doctrine of St Thomas; but he has always kept before his eyes the needs of those Priests who would desire to have some assistance in directing souls called to something higher than the ordinary Christian life. The fight against all forms of financial crimes is like running a race with no finishing line. All organizations are implored to continuously devise effective and plausible remedial measures resulting in tighter controls being adopted thereby thwarting financial crimes. If managerial accountability and transparency are embodied in all sectors coupled with the right tone at the top, implementation of corporate governance would be easier. There would be reduction of criminal activities which inevitably bring about lack of investor confidence, capital flight, closures of companies and industries which consequently create untold misery for already helpless citizenry who will have little to do apart from engaging in criminal activities. It is time to break that cycle. There is no honour in financial crime. Punishment of offenders and recoveries of stolen funds are so rare that prevention is the only viable course of action. Feasible and plausible preventative measures are much cheaper and far less painful than post-financial crime investigations and litigations. It is better to drain the swamps than to fight the alligators. Let's play our part.

The Diary of a Nobody

The Moths On A Changing reflects the lofty pride of humans as well as their lack of interest in people of other cultures through the analogy of the Peppered Moths. The story for the book was inspired by a University anthropology class Ms. Otobo attended. She learned that, in Manchester, England, the Peppered Moths named Onyx were eaten almost to extinction by birds because their dark wings stood out against the lichens-covered bark that was their habitat; while the silvery Peppered Moths were spared because the color of their wings hid them from their predators. Interestingly, when industrial pollution killed the lichen-covered bark in the forest, turning the natural white color of the lichens to dark color thereby making the silver Moths visible, the dark Peppered Moths became invisible to the birds and were spared. Ms. Bess Blessing Otobo used the story of the Moths to talk about our environment and to illustrate that sometimes, people are oblivious to the
